Have YOU given a good book for a man in the Service?
STATE LIBRARY COMMISSION

Mrs. Julia Brown Asplund, Chairman.
Mrs. Burton G. Dwyer, Vice-Chairman.
Mrs. Joseph Byrne.
Mrs. W. E. Moore.
Mr. Raymond Huff.
Mrs. Irene S. Peck, Executive Secretary, and Director State Library Extension Service.

Arla Coldervart, President, State Library Association.

The State Library Extension Service was created for the purpose of making books available to the people in the state having no library facilities. Collections of books are loaned to schools, libraries, or responsible groups for three months. Individuals may borrow three books for three weeks. Borrowers pay the postage. For further information write the Director.

1945 VICTORY BOOK CAMPAIGN

What are we—in New Mexico—going to do about this Victory Book campaign? Though this is the January-March-February as I write, for we've delayed publication to get our V. C. launched. The books which we are going to use are fine, good books but there are not enough of them. They are coming only in dribs and drabs and we need a lot of books.

The books we collect are to be used for the men who are stationed in New Mexico and there are thousands of men here now. You all know our own near which these men are stationed. They are small towns. The people are friendly and hospitable, but with all the good in the world they cannot supply enough recreations for these thousands of men. Books—help and the men are asking for them.

Have you who are chairmen and committee members done all that you can bring books? Have you seen in frequent news releases to the local press? Are all your posters displayed? Has some one talked to all the organizations about the V. B. C.? Have you asked the churches to make announcements? Do you have posters at the motion picture houses? Have your committee members called the people they know have books which they might give? Have you arranged for "pluge" and announcements over your local radio?

About an hour ago a woman came into the Public Library with an armful of books. Her son—who is in the Army—had written her asking them from his library for other service men. Can't we who live comfortably at home do something, too?

IRENE S. PECK, Director.

The New Mexico Library Association through its legislative committee, which met in Santa Fe January 7 mapped a five-point program to increase library attendance to library matters in New Mexico.

The points in the Association's program follow:

1. The New Mexico Library Association will not sponsor and recommends inclusion of separate and distinct library service items in school and institutional budgets, and it condemns the alleged practice of transferring funds budgeted for library service to janitorial or other purposes.

2. The New Mexico Library Association will cooperate with public libraries and special libraries throughout the state in legislation which seeks to extend war-vital information to the civilian population and library service to men in army camps and bases throughout their respective areas.

3. The New Mexico Library Association will cooperate with educational authorities in promotion of any legislation they may sponsor which promotes library service as an essential part of education.

4. The New Mexico Library Association encourages and recommends inclusion of separate and distinct library service items in school and institutional budgets, and it condemns the alleged practice of transferring funds budgeted for library service to janitorial or other purposes.

5. Budget items for library service should be maintained at all costs during this critical period in view of the additional demands placed upon librarians and libraries in all types of libraries throughout the state and nation.

SCHOOL LIBRARY STANDARDS

The State Library Commission, the State Board of Education, and the Library Section of the New Mexico Education Association are working to bring up the standards of school libraries in the state. Recommendations for standards for high school libraries were drawn up by the committee from the School Library Section of the New Mexico Education Association a year ago and the recommendations were approved by the Board of Education and the State Library Commission. The committee is now working on standards for elementary schools.

Meanwhile it has been felt that the allocation of funds in the school budget was one of the basic difficulties and that specific amounts should be designated for school libraries and not be diverted to other uses. At the December 1st meeting of the State Library Commission the following resolution was adopted and presented to the State Board of Education with a request for its approval.

"THEREFORE in view of the increased demands of the states for books for the Extension Library that county educational budget commissions be urged to appropriate specific amounts in their budgets for school library services and that libraries be included in each school budget for library purposes and that no transfer be permitted."

A. I. A.

The Executive Board and Council of the New Mexico Library Association met on January 30 and February 1 voted to hold no regular annual conference in 1945.

Business meetings of the Council and Executive Board will be called only if they are necessary for the transaction of business and not to exceed one a year. The President is authorized to fill vacancies.

The Executive Board recommends that officers of round tables also be from their positions for one year.

The divisions and sections have authority to make their own elections. The election of officers in the A.L.A. will proceed as usual, the new officers to take office on July 1.

MESSAGE FROM THE FOOD ADMINISTRATOR

Libraries are serving in this war, as they served in the last war. Their "War Information Centers" are helping millions of Americans to understand more fully what we are fighting for, and to learn the most effective ways of working together toward victory.

The way we manage our food supply is going to have a lot to do with how soon we win this war. Already libraries have made available much valuable information on how to produce food and how to use it wisely.

Now, as Secretary of Agriculture, I am issuing to all librarians of America a special call to active service on the food front.

We need great quantities of food for our own armed forces; for our civilian families on the home front; for our fighting allies.

Although farmers in the face of great difficulties are now producing more of the things we need, it is increasingly clear that no matter how much food our farmers produce, more will be needed.

The war job of every American includes conserving our food resources. A pound of food saved in the home will go just as far toward feeding a soldier as does a pound of food produced on the farm.

The big job ahead is that of letting people know how they may help to win the war through maximum production, fair sharing, and intelligent use of food.

We must do this job well if we are going to meet all of the wartime needs for American food, both at home and abroad. We can do it. Barren widespread drought or some other unlooked for emergency, I believe that all the people here at home can have healthful, nourishing diets at the same time that we keep our fighting men the best fed in the world and meet the essential requirements of our allies.

Publications concerning food production, distribution, and conservation are weapons that will help bring victory. We must make these weapons, as we would any other, available to our people. A library's responsibility to its public and to the nation at war will not be fulfilled merely by placing publications on shelves.
By making such publications widely available and encouraging their use by every citizen, librarians in both city and rural areas, can do much toward promoting good management of food—one of our most vital war materials.

CLAUD B. WICKARD,
Secretary of Agriculture.

The State Library Extension Service has many books on nutrition and diet, canning, war-time meals and vegetable gardens which may be borrowed any place in the state where such books are not otherwise available. It is hoped wide use will be made of them by any study groups or individuals who they can help.

NEWS NOTES

Three New Mexico librarians who have always given generously of their time and interest in all state library affairs are now in the armed forces. They will be greatly missed.

Captain P. P. Price, Assistant Librarian and for the past year acting librarian, New Mexico Military Institute, has been ordered on active duty.

Kenneth Brough, librarian, Eastern New Mexico College library has resigned and is also in the army.

A letter from Leonard B. Fritz, librarian Harwood Foundation Library, Taos, New Mexico, and last year's treasurer, New Mexico Library Association, states that he has completed his preliminary training at San Diego, Cal., and is now an officer candidate Camp Davis, North Carolina. He extends greetings to all New Mexico librarians.
